Japanese Videogame CEO Opens $100 Million Napa Winery (Wine Spectator)
Recession? What Recession? Defying tough economic times, the CEO of Japan-based videogame publisher Capcom Co. has opened a Napa Valley winery after 20 years of preparation and $100 million of investment. Kenzo Estate, named for owner Kenzo Tsujimoto, opened to the public May 1. Visitors will be treated to wine and food from a roster of Napa all-stars. The wines are a collaboration between consulting winemaker Heidi Barrett of Screaming Eagle, Grace Family and Dalla Valle fame and vineyard...
